1. Africa and the disruptions of the twenty-first century

ZELEZA, Paul Tiyambe

Dakar: CODESRIA, 2021. - xx-367 p. (CODESRIA Book Series) ISBN: 9782869789975.

Related Subjects : crisis | racial discrimination | political problems | higher education | geopolitics | Africa | disruption | racial disfunctions | global turbulence | political dramas | mythologisation

Abstract : This collection of essays interrogates the repositioning of Africa and its diasporas in the unfolding disruptive transformations of the early twenty-first century. It is divided into five parts focusing on America's racial dysfunctions, navigating global turbulence, Africa's political dramas, the continent's persistent mythologisation and disruptions in higher education. It closes with tributes to two towering African public intellectuals, Ali Mazrui and Thandika Mkandawire, who have since joined the ancestors.

Summary : This book is based on 22 country case studies documenting experiences with quality improvement programs in Africa, forty background papers and a review of unpublished African literature. It summarizes research findings on quality and quality improvement, equity and gender and documents changes in the way external agencies help countries make progress towards the EFA goals. It reviews experiences in sub-Saharan Africa related to the following issues: "Investments in inputs that are most cost-effective"; "Curriculum reforms to enhance relevance"; "Changes in instructional strategies and teacher development to improve school effectiveness"; and "Differentiation of programs and diversification of providers to improve equity of results". It explores how the emphasis on quality and equity affect the way education systems are financed and managed, and how student's learning progress is measured and monitored. Finally it provides a strategic framework for quality improvement.

Résumé: La communauté linguistique mandingue (bambara-malinké-dioula).une des principales langues de communication interculturelle en Afrique de l'Ouest depuis des siècles, élargit le champ de sa créativité lexicale par la production continue de nouveaux mots issus de sa vision du monde réagissant aux dynamiques de changement socio-culturelles, scientifiques et technologiques.

L'ambition épistémique de cet ouvrage de lexicologie, entre structuralisme et générativisme, est d'exposer les ressources canoniques et symboliques du vocabulaire déployées par la diversité des locuteurs mandingues pour maîtriser tout progrès et l'inscrire durablement dans leur propre univers. C'est dire combien la détention linguistique, à savoir qui parle quelle langue, et au nom de qui, est nécessairement liée à l'espace temps de conquête stratégique du pouvoir politique, donc au contrôle effectif ou non des institutions, et des producteurs de discours autonomes qui les animent en idées qui influencent les relations humaines, notamment maternelles

14. Une décolonisation de la pensée : études de philosophie afrocentrique

ISBN: 9791023106671.

Related Subjects : philosophie | afrocentrisme | philosophie africaine | décolonisation des savoirs

Description : Après les vives polémiques dont il a été l'objet dans le monde académique et non académique, peut-on encore mobiliser le modèle afrocentrique pour penser les questions de notre temps ? Est-il opportun de recourir à ce modèle à l'ère de l'interconnexion des savoirs, de la globalisation et de la « créolisation » et dans quelle mesure permet-il d'analyser le processus de décolonisation de la pensée et des savoirs ? Notre objectif est ici de montrer que dans « l'affaire » de l'afrocentrisme, et les « querelles » épistémologiques et idéologiques qu'il a suscitées, il est encore possible de lire un paradigme critique oeuvrant à la décolonisation de la pensée.

On trouvera dans ce livre un aperçu du débat américain sur l'afrocentrisme avec quelques-uns de ses protagonistes (M. Kete Asante, A. Schlesinger, C. Walker, K. Appiah, B. Obama), une étude de quelques-unes de ses figures africaines (Cheikh Anta Diop, F. Eboussi Boulaga, M. Towa et H. Odera Oruka) et des réflexions sur certains questionnements afrocentriques (la décolonisation de la philosophie et des institutions scientifiques africaines, de la théorie du droit et des droits de l'homme, de la bonne gouvernance, de la citoyenneté et du développement, et la fuite des cerveaux).

Résumé : Le présent ouvrage est issu d'un dossier préparé dans le cadre de la contribution de la France à la 36e session de la Commission de la population et du développement de l'ONU, tenue en mars-avril 2003 sur le thème « Population, éducation et développement ». Alors qu'à la suite de la Conférence de Jomtien, en 1990, la priorité est d'abord à l'accroissement (le plus rapidement possible) des niveaux de scolarisation, et que l'éducation (scolaire) est présentée dans les discours officiels comme « la » solution aux « problèmes » de population et de développement, il apparaît utile et opportun de s'interroger à nouveau sur ce triptyque « population, éducation et développement », notamment sur les conditions de réalisation de l'Education Pour Tous (EPT), et sur les finalités de l'éducation. Sans prétendre à une quelconque exhaustivité sur une thématique aussi complexe, cet ouvrage en aborde divers aspects, certains encore peu traités, combinant exercices de synthèse et réflexions critiques. En regard de la situation actuelle, des enjeux et défis qui se posent en Afrique subsaharienne, il concerne prioritairement cette région du monde.

Une première partie aborde ce triptyque à travers l'influence de l'éducation sur la fécondité et la mortalité, la problématique du défi posé par la fuite des cerveaux, et l'apport de la recherche en économie sur la relation entre éducation et développement. Intitulée « les politiques éducatives en question ». la deuxième partie propose tout d'abord une réflexion sur la nouvelle donne pour l'éducation au Sud dans le contexte de la mondialisation, suivie d'un développement sur la question du coût et du financement de l'éducation, avec en dernier lieu une interrogation : quelles politiques éducatives pour quelle éducation ? La troisième partie porte sur les rapports entre école et société à travers, d'une part, une analyse de l'évolution des représentations et des rapports entre famille et école, et, d'autre part, un état des connaissances sur les relations entre scolarisation et travail des enfants. La dernière partie traite enfin de deux thématiques spécifiques : l'impact du Sida sur l'éducation ; les relations entre éducation, violences et conflits. L'ouvrage se termine par une série d'enseignements et de recommandations, aussi bien sur le plan de la recherche que des politiques liées à l'éducation.

16. Démographie, paix et sécurité : regards croisés pour un Sahel central résilient

NGOM, Mabingué; ed.

Dakar : L'harmattan-Sénégal, 2020. - 178 p. (Développement durable et économie générationnelle). ISBN: 9782343217864.

Related Subjects : Démographie | paix | Sécurité | Sahel | Conflits | politique gouvernementale | Sahel résilient

Introduction : Cet ouvrage synthétise les développements et conclusions de plusieurs études qui ont été menées sur le triptyque « Démographie, Paix et Sécurité » (DPS), sous l'égide du bureau régional pour l'Afrique de l'Ouest et Centrale du Fonds des Nations Unies pour la Population. Ces études empiriques font l'objet, dans le présent ouvrage, d'un effort de capitalisation de l'état des lieux et du diagnostic des perspectives de développement à long terme, sous la forme de scénarios, pour le Sahel. Élaboré dans un contexte où le nexus DPS interpelle nombre d'agences de coopération bilatérales et multilatérales ainsi que le Système des NU, cet ouvrage se veut, à travers le diagnostic stratégique du Sahel qu'il propose, une contribution à l'analyse des composantes de cette problématique et à la compréhension des enjeux qui lui sont associés, en ayant à l'esprit l'axiome selon lequel il ne saurait y avoir de bonnes réponses à une question mal posée et qu'à l'inverse une question bien posée est à moitié résolue. À ce premier objectif, qui est de l'ordre de la clarification conceptuelle et analytique, s'ajoute un second qui est d'ordre plus opérationnel : l'ouvrage se veut une contribution à l'amélioration de la Stratégie Sahel du Système des NU dont le triple objectif est (i) d'améliorer la gouvernance inclusive et efficace dans la région ; (ii) de renforcer les mécanismes de sécurité nationaux et régionaux afin qu'ils puissent faire face aux menaces transfrontalières de plus en plus pesantes et (iii) d'intégrer les plans et les interventions humanitaires et de développement pour renforcer la résilience à long terme. 28 Cet ouvrage est, en somme, une contribution intellectuelle à la compréhension du nexus DPS pour la définition d'un cadre conceptuel en vue de guider les efforts de construction de la résilience dans le Sahel central. Cet effort s'inscrit dans une perspective opérationnelle, dans le sens d'affiner et de mieux orienter les politiques mises en œuvre pour un Sahel résilient. Outre qu'elle est à la fois théorique et empirique, cette réflexion se veut systémique en ce qu'elle éclaire tout autant les différentes variables constitutives du système que les interrelations entre elles. L'ouvrage comporte, outre cette introduction, quatre parties et une conclusion. La première partie est consacrée au contexte, à la définition des concepts, à la problématique et à la méthodologie suivie. La seconde partie porte sur les regards croisés du nexus DPS dans le Sahel central. La troisième partie élabore et présente les scénarii d'évolution possibles pour la région. Enfin, la quatrième partie présente la stratégie d'opérationnalisation du scénario de référence.

Summary : Cette étude décrit et analyse les contextes, structures et circonstances qui conditionnent la participation des filles et des femmes dans l'espace public, dans les sphères de prise de décision et dans des rôles de leadership au sein des arènes locales au Burkina Faso. Malgré des décennies de campagnes d'information et de sensibilisation menées, de mesures engagées et de décisions prises, l'égalité du genre en ce qui concerne le leadership sociopolitique et la participation politique demeure faible, tandis que les femmes comme mobilisatrices sociales et politiques sont mises en avant. Une équipe des anthropologues a conduit les recherches de terrain sur le leadership féminin dans 14 communes burkinabè. Le thème central est le combat des femmes leaders. Il s'agit de ces « femmes de devant » qui ne se laissent pas faire et qui luttent pour construire un leadership féminin qui peut définitivement changer la donne pour permettre à ce que les femmes puissent percer en politique. Au quotidien, les femmes de devant mènent le combat sur plusieurs fronts: politique, institutionnel, ménager, associatif, financier, social, éducatif, psychologique, culturel, etc.

Introduction : This book is about the gender dimensions of natural resource exploitation and management in Asia. It provides an exploration of the uneasy negotiations between theory, policy and practice that are often evident within the realm of gender, environment and natural resource management, especially where gender is understood as a political, negotiated and contested element of social relationships. In recent years, there has been some disquiet that, amidst efforts to mainstream gender into natural resource management interventions and into development policy more broadly, gender has lost its critical and politicized edge, having been institutionalized into a series of tools and techniques that are far removed from the transformatory potential of gender as a feminist concept (Kabeer, 2005; Molyneux and Razavi, 2005; Leach, 2007).

The tension between gender as a technical fix and a more politicized view of gender is examined in this book. The chapters touch on theory, policy and practice, all with a shared focus on gender as a critical analytical concept for understanding the social and political dimensions of natural resource management and governance across a range of empirical settings. In different ways, and with varying commitments to particular conceptualizations of gender, the authors explore how gender subjectivities, ideologies and identities are produced, employed and contested within natural resource governance, and how gender discourses shape exclusions and possibilities within environment/development processes. The book focuses on environments in Asia as a realm in which new realities are producing significant challenges for natural resource management, livelihoods.

Summary : This collective volume contains revised papers of a workshop (Johannesburg, South Africa, April 2001) on gender and urban housing, with emphasis on qualitative methodology. It illustrates an important perspective of gender and gender relations in the various facets of housing provision/acquisition approaches, including homeownership, low-income and self-help schemes; tenancy; sanitation technology; housing construction and privatization. Several major issues emerging from these are classified under the following themes: gender neutrality; gender exclusion; property rights; family, home and inheritance; and gendered work. The authors present case studies from the following countries : Botswana (Faustin Kalabamu); Lesotho (Victor Ngonidzashe Muzvidziwa); Malawi (Emma C. Kishindo); South Africa (Nonhlanhla Mjoli-Mncube; Mabel Radebe); Swaziland (Miranda Mafafo); Zambia (Ann Schlyter); and Zimbabwe (Thando Gwebu). [ASC Leiden abstract]

Abstract : A major objective of this edited collection is to document the experiences of practitioners and experts with respect to the varied practices of rights in development and how these have addressed gender equality and women's autonomy in the South in particular. This publication explores whether the field of development is actually able to deliver on rights in a way that advances a gender equality agenda and treats and sees women as entities in themselves, worthy of rights, and not simply in relation to a man and as subordinate within gender relations. Summary : Eritrean refugees crisscross between countries in the Horn of Africa and North Africa in search of a safe place. Along their journeys, they are looted, threatened, intimidated, violated, and held for ransom. This book revisits the human trafficking crisis that first emerged in the Sinai at the end of 2008 and examines the expansion of human trafficking of Eritrean refugees and other forms of exploitation beyond the Sinai. It focuses on the modus operandi of these practices and on identifying their key facilitators and beneficiaries. The book locates the origin of these practices within Eritrea; it reveals how a deliberate policy of impoverishment and human rights abuses has driven the people out of the country, and how individuals within Eritrea, and particularly within the ruling party, benefit from the smuggling and trafficking of Eritrean refugees. The use of information communication technologies (ICTs) is identified as key to the new modus operandi of this criminal business and is found to further facilitate widespread collective trauma amongst Eritreans, who witness the abuse of their family members and fellow nationals through digital networks. An entire section in this book is dedicated to assessing the extent and effects of individual and collective trauma caused by Sinai trafficking and to examining potential approaches to healing. Other sections discuss the vulnerabilities of Eritrean minors and women, and the connections between human trafficking, terrorism and organ trafficking. The last section of the book raises the question of accountability. It examines and evaluates international responses to this forgotten crisis, and discusses the need for policies that tackle the problem where it emerges: in Eritrea. Summary : "In many societies, histories of exclusion, racism, and nationalist violence often create divisions so deep that finding a way to deal with the atrocities of the past seems nearly impossible. These societies face difficult practical questions about how to devise new state and civil society institutions that will respond to massive or systematic violations of human rights, recognize victims, and prevent the recurrence of abuse. Identities in Transition: Challenges for Transitional Justice in Divided Societies brings together a rich group of international researchers and practitioners who, for the first time, examine transitional justice through an "identity" lens. They tackle ways that transitional justice can act as a means of political learning across communities; foster citizenship, trust, and recognition; and break down harmful myths and stereotypes, as steps toward meeting the difficult challenges for transitional justice in divided societies"-- Provided by publisher.

Summary : In recent years, social protection issues have gained unprecedented momentum in Africa. This is reflected in the fact that most African countries have either introduced or are considering social protection measures, as witnessed by initiatives within the African Union (AU), African national governments and their development partners in the international donor community. The 2004 'Ouagadougou Declaration and Plan of Action', the 2006 'Livingstone and Yaounde Calls for Action', the 2008 'African Union Social Policy Framework for Africa' and the 2010 'Social Ministers' Khartoum Declaration on Social Policy Action Towards Social Inclusion' are key milestones towards an Africa-wide consensus on the need for social protection. Many national governments are also in the process of establishing social protection strategies and policies. Unfortunately, most of them give little attention to the role or potential of informal social protection systems. This is despite the fact that the rural population and those who are engaged in the informal economy, which together constitute the bulk of these countries' populations, depend on informal social protection systems. The possibility of building on existing informal social protection systems and creating complementary linkages between the formal and informal systems is rarely considered by policy-makers and donor agencies in Africa. Instead, most attention is given to formal safety net programmes.

Abstract : Since gender entered the development discourse in the Seventies, African countries have increasingly taken the concept on board in policy and practice. This concern may be due to either one or a combination of the following factors: the ideological positioning of African countries, demands by their donors and development partners, and demands by organised local groups and NGOs. Gender in the development discourse ought to transform power relations between men and women and shift them to social relations that reflect their equal access to productive resources, opportunities and social and material benefits. The result of such actions should be an achievement of comparable status of women and men.

This volume, initiated by OSSREA, seeks to examine in more depth, issues regarding the gender-power imbalance in sub-Saharan African countries, with a specific focus on the eastern and southern African regions. The chapters in this book present research that examines and analyses the effectiveness and efficiency of gender mainstreaming policies, strategies and projects developed and implemented by national and international actors. The themes interweave with each other although they address gender issues in specific countries and specific contexts. This can be explained by the shared colonial and post-colonial heritage of African countries. It is useful, therefore, to view the structure of the book as a spiral of inter-connected issues that address similar themes, approaching them from different levels. Purely for ease of reading, the contributions have been organised into three parts, with over arching themes that at first glance may seem not to fit well together. A theme that runs through all the chapters is the persistence of patriarchal values and attitudes in Africa and its constraining effect on the achievement of gender equity and equality.

Abstract : This monograph is a major work of historical biography devoted to the leader of Ghana's independence movement and the major black African leader of the 50s-70s in terms of global impact and effectiveness.

"...This book presents new material and new analysis, which helps clarify aspects of the record, while advancing new perspectives. What comes across clearly throughout the book is the significant contribution of Nkrumah's vision and personality at a critical moment of the history of Africa and the Third World. He, perhaps more than any other, was able to identify, focus and catalyse the major factors and players driving the struggle for political independence in Ghana and the liberation of other parts of Africa. In the process, he committed his life and work totally to a wide variety of activities and processes in Ghana, the continent and in the global Non-Aligned Movement." Apilaga Sawyer, Association of African Universities, March 2007

"This is an objective study which should be read by all concerned with post colonial Africa." Conor Cruise O'Brien

Rooney's study feels a great research need: Nkrumah has very wide name recognition and fame but this is accompanied by, paradoxically, a sketchy, often oversimplified knowledge about the events and processes of his life. This study adds valuable insights to Nkrumah's life in and relations with America as well as his interest and involvement with socialism and Marxism.

Summary : More than ever before, the gaze of global investment has been directed to the drylands of Africa, but what does this mean for these regions' pastoralists and other livestock-keepers and their livelihoods? Will those who have occupied drylands over generations benefit from the developments, as claimed, or is this a new type of territorialisation, exacerbating social inequality? This book's detailed local studies of investments at various stages of development - from Kenya, Tanzania, Somaliland, Ethiopia - explore, for the first time, how large land, resource and infrastructure projects shape local politics and livelihoods. Land and resources use, based on ancestral precedence and communal practices, and embedded regional systems of trade, are unique to these areas, yet these lands are now seen as the new frontier for development of national wealth. By examining the ways in which large-scale investments enmesh with local political and social relations, the chapters show how even the most elaborate plans of financiers, contractors and national governments come unstuck and are re-made in the guise of not only states' grand modernist visions, but also those of herders and small-town entrepreneurs in the pastoral drylands. The contributors also demonstrate how and why large-scale investments have advanced in a more piecemeal way as the challenges of implementation have mounted.

Summary : This study is about the formation and spread of the Sungusungu movement in Tanzania that arose in the early 1980s among the Sukuma-Nyamwezi people in west-central Tanzania, south of Lake Victoria. In the wake of the international oil crisis in the 1970s, aggravated by the costly war with Uganda that led to the demise of Idi Amin's regime in 1979, the country experienced a period of deep economic and social crisis with inflation, collapsing markets, a shortage of basic commodities and a breakdown of law and order, signified by increasing levels of violent crime, such as organized cattle theft and banditry in the rural areas. It was against this backdrop that people began to organize and arm themselves to cope with the disintegrating and malevolent forces they were experiencing, not only as an existential threat to their daily lives but to society at large. The quest for everyday peace, mhola, among people was omnipresent and the movement swept like a bush-fire from village to village over the large Sukuma-Nyamwezi area and beyond. Within only a couple of years several million people were involved in or affected by it. The emergence of Sungusungu in its particular sociocultural context constitutes a generic moment that sparks a process with, over time, many different far-reaching social, political and judicial repercussions. Based on long-term fieldwork engagements and an extensive literature review, the study sets out to trace the trajectory of the movement in its various cultural, social and political details from its early emergence as a genuine localized popular movement and then, over time until the present, through a series of various interventions that gradually transformed it into institutionalized forms of community policing under state supervision and control, emulated all over Tanzania and spread even to parts of Kenya.

Summary : The dynamic nature of Christianity has necessitated its movement from the cathedral to the mountain top. This has occasioned a proliferation of Prayer Mountains throughout Africa. In Yorubaland of southwestern Nigeria, Prayer Mountain is known as Ori-Oke. Like many communities in Africa, the Yoruba are confronted with fundamental challenges in life for which people do not rest until they find solutions. Within the praxis of Nigerian Christian lexicon Ori-Oke is synonymous with the enactment of a sacred space on a mountain top characterised by various prayer regimes, rituals, exorcism and religious practices, aimed at eliciting the help of the divine to alleviate the existential challenges of devotees. This book explores the resacralisation of space on the mountains, highlighting how humans and the divine interact in Yorubaland. It brings into conversation 35 empirically rich scholarly essays on the role of Ori-Oke to those seeking divine intervention in their lives. Today, Ori-Oke have become centres of pilgrimage as a result of the lived experiences of devotees, creating unique religious value quite distinct from the aesthetic value of these mountain tops. The spirituality of Ori-Oke is anchored on the absolute belief in God and the infusion of traditional African worldview sensibilities in religious rites and worship. Ori-Oke spirituality employs resources of Christian tradition, introduced by the formal agents of Christianity, synthesised with traditional culture, to develop a life based on the precepts of an African Christianity. The book is an intellectual discourse on Ori-Oke spirituality, reflecting its contemporary relevance in a context of religious innovation and competition.

Summary : This book presents a number of key studies pertaining to the most pressing challenges of economic regional integration in West Africa. The issues of monetary coordination, foreign exchange volatility, taxation, savings and macroeconomic convergence are investigated from a regional perspective. The characteristics of West Africa's trade policy are reviewed and assessed in comparison to those of the Southern African Development Community (SADC). The extent to which regional integration can tackle the challenge of unemployment is the focus of studies on labour markets. Development of the private sector and coordination of regional cross-border transportation are examined through the lens of economic collaboration between Arab and African countries. The book provides fresh new answers to persistent development questions and sheds new light on long-held views that are either incomplete or no longer true. It also opens new perspectives on the search for sustainable avenues for Africa's development. In this regard, it may contribute to the emergence of a new paradigm on Africa's development process and its science-based, policy-oriented implementation.

Summary : "In Regional Integration in Africa: What Role for South Africa, Henri Bah, Zondi Siphamandla and Andre Mbata Mangu reflect on African integration and the contribution of post-apartheid South Africa. From their different scientific background, they demonstrate that despite some progress made under the African Union that superseded the Organisation of African Unity, Africa is still lagging behind in terms of regional integration and South Africa, which benefitted from the rest of the continent in her struggle against apartheid, has not as yet played a major role in this process. Apart from contributing to advancing knowledge, the book should be a recommended read for all those interested in African regional integration and the relationships between Africa and post-apartheid South Africa. Contributors are Henri Bah, Andre Mbata Mangu, Eddy Maloka and Zondi Siphamandla"-- Provided by publisher.

Summary : "All too often in conflict situations, rape is referred to as a 'weapon of war', a term presented as self-explanatory through its implied storyline of gender and warring. In this provocative but much-needed book, Eriksson Baaz and Stern challenge the dominant understandings of sexual violence in conflict and post-conflict settings. Reading with and against feminist analyses of the interconnections between gender, warring, violence and militarization, the authors address many of the thorny issues inherent in the arrival of sexual violence on the global security agenda. Based on original fieldwork in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, as well as research material from other conflict zones, Sexual Violence as a Weapon of War? challenges the recent prominence given to sexual violence, bravely highlighting various problems with isolating sexual violence from other violence in war. A much-anticipated book by two acknowledged experts in the field, on an issue that has become an increasingly important security, legal and gender topic."--Publisher's website.

Summary : SAS2: A Guide to Collaborative Inquiry and Social Engagement represents a significant international effort to support the creation and mobilization of practical, authentic knowledge for social change. The guiding principle behind SAS2 (Social Analysis Systems, www.sas2.net) is that group dialogue and social inquiry are crucial for local and global development. Social issues must be addressed socially and in a multistakeholder mode, not by private interests and experts alone, and the insights that emerge fully integrated into processes of knowledge production, planning, and decision-making. Part 1 outlines the concepts and skillful means needed to support multistakeholder dialogue. It also provides detailed instructions on how to integrate and ground collaborative inquiry in the projects, plans, evaluations and activities of multiple stakeholders. Part 2 presents a selection of techniques for collaborative inquiry and examples of real-life applications in South Asia and Latin America. The examples focus on a range of issues including land tenure, local economic development, agriculture, forestry, fisheries, and organizational development. This book will be an invaluable resource for researchers, facilitators and activists working with people to solve problems and support inclusive inquiry and decision-making. It will also be useful to scholars and academics studying and teaching participatory action research in the Social Sciences.

Summary: In West African Senegal, women traditionally rely on their own networks based on gendered groups supporting everyday life. Urbanization of the country is associated with the emergence of various forms of women's groups in the expanding neighborhoods and the groups are particularly instrumental in supporting their members' livelihoods at times of economic adversity. As a result of generalized material difficulties, a growing number of husbands and fathers can no longer assume their roles as breadwinners and there is a clear shift of responsibility in the families on the wives and mothers. In this situation, the importance of the women's groups has grown in salience. While traditional women's groups are informal and initiated spontaneously, the various microcredit institutions targeting especially the financial needs of poor women in developing countries have imposed formal structures. Loans accorded to groups are expected to both increase social capital and to be secured by it. The study at hand looks at the Senegalese women's groups through the concept of social capital and asks whether the groups can be considered as sources of social capital to their members and in what ways the groups contribute to the support of members' livelihoods. Here, social capital is seen as an individual asset and as a part of available resources that form a personal livelihood. The availability of the assets depends on institutional structures and the role of the women's groups in individual livelihood trajectories within these structural limits form the central issue for the study. The empirical evidence for the study is based on mixed methods research done between 1993 and 2008 in the town of Rufisque. The core is qualitative and consists of a set of 30 semi-structured interviews done in 2001 with members from three distinct women's groups in Rufisque. This part of the research has its baseline in a quantitative mapping of all associational life in Rufisque done in 1993-94 and revealing the dominating presence of women's groups on the associational arena. A further qualitative follow up of the three groups the interviewed women belonged to was done in 2008. The time span of 15 year gives the study an outlook showing how social change occurs in individual women's lives, as well as in their groups

Summary : "For centuries, immigration has been a topic of major concern in the US and has seen many significant shifts in policy, particularly within the last 150 years. In the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, immigration policy focused on restricting people originating from China. Then, after the passage of the Emergency Quota Act in 1921, quotas for different nations based on existing populations in the country were introduced. In 1965, the US abolished the quota act in favor of a family-based immigration regime. Near the end of the 20th century, immigration policy became preoccupied with the control of "illegal immigrants" mainly from Mexico and Latin American countries. After the 9/11 attacks in 2001, the fight against terrorism became a major part of the immigration debate. Taking into account the most recent immigration bans and President Donald Trump's pledges to build a wall on the US/Mexican border, immigration policy is again an urgent political and social issue. While much attention has been paid to refugees and immigrants from Mexico, Latin America, the Middle East, and Asian countries, very little attention has been given to African immigrants in the US after the Civil War-even though the number of African immigrants living in America has significantly increased over the years. By 2015, more than two million African immigrants were living in the US. Kentucky, in particular, has seen a large increase in African immigrants and refugees since the 1990s, with the population growing from 1,000 to nearly 20,000 residents. The existence of several refugee resettlement agencies and other non-governmental and state sponsored programs, such as Global Lex and the Kentucky Refugee Ministries, make Kentucky a welcoming state for immigrants, and many migrate to the state for educational opportunities. In Voices of African Immigrants in Kentucky, authors Angene and Jack Wilson in conjunction with Iddah Otieno and Francis Musoni, scholars from Kenya and Zimbabwe, challenge scholars and policy makers to broaden their understanding of the diversity of immigration issues in the US. This book, almost entirely based upon one-on-one interviews, provides a historical and theoretical overview of African immigrants in Kentucky, descriptions of their life in home countries, why and how they came to the Bluegrass state-whether it was voluntary or forced-and how they identify themselves and remain in contact with Africa. The book also details the struggles of being an immigrant in Kentucky, challenges that include cultural differences, language barriers, work, and discrimination. Conversely, the narrative also details the positive experiences such as education and job opportunities. Voices of African Immigrants in Kentucky includes stories of next generation African immigrants-young people who were either born in or came to America at a very young age-about their outlook on growing up in the US. By focusing on a less well known immigrant group, the authors spread an understanding of immigration patterns, experiences, and processes in Kentucky"-- Provided by publisher.

Summary : In 2000, Zimbabwe's century old land movement took a swift turn, rupturing into nationwide occupation of mainly White owned commercial farms. The speed with which occupations spread, their organisation, the political and economic context, the historical origins and interaction of the forces, shaped an unprecedented and complex land movement impacting on the region, the continent and beyond. Zimbabwe's land occupations were unique in two ways. First, the leading role of War Veterans of the 1970s anti-colonial guerrilla war in the land occupations was exceptional. Second, the simultaneous challenge to racial, settler economic dominance and neo-colonialism by marginalised peasants, farm workers, war veterans, urban youth and the unemployed, was a new experience in post-colonial history of Africa's liberation movements. Zimbabwe's land occupations were a long continuum of land struggles to resolve the colonial legacy of racial resource distribution but as they occurred, the role played by the state, the contested terrain of the civil society, formidable political opposition and imperialist interventions of western powers clouded the identity of the land movement thereby making it difficult to distinguish the moving current and the identity of forces from the wider political conflicts swirling around it. Who exactly initiated the occupations and for what reasons? This thesis attempts to unpack these intricately locked forces in a bid to understand their origins, interests, strategies, tactics and above all, the alliances between and amongst them, for clearer understanding of the core of the movement. This thesis traces the history of Zimbabwe's liberation movement as foundation to understanding political reconfigurations that shaped post independence social movements and assesses agrarian technology responses to such a dramatic social change of Africa's post-colonial settler society. The thesis provokes prognostic thoughts about the role played by social capital of liberation struggles in future economic and cultural emancipation from shackles of neo-colonialism and racial, settler capitalism.
